In the atlantic of Colombia, you see that small archipelago consisting of 8 little islands.

But only on one of them you ´ll find a little town in the middle of the sea, where in an area of 1000 meters, 1000 persons have their homes.

Half of them are children, all dark -skinned and very beautiful, a pure race - it´s an island with a child's soul because more children than adults live there.

A magic town, danger is a foreign word, they are a big family - one house stands next to the other and all doors and windows are opened.

Children dance on the streets to the typical music of the island all day and all night long and the women even dance while putting their washing on the line.

They may look like animals making love, but this is their dance.

We are talking of the archipelago of San Bernardo del Viento, in the atlantic of the beautiful Colombia, where the summer never goes away, where all the people eat fish every day and where the badness doesn´t exists.

A magic world where everyone is happy and in party-mood all the time, just because they don't know anything else, here they grow up and here they stay forever.

This world isn't easy to find on this earth, but it exists in the atlantic coast of Colombia, a place where you won´t see soccer, because there is simply no space to play it - the material world has gone to the second place, it is not important.

The important thing is that these people who live here are all very happy, very far away from the "real world".
